PREFACE

THE present is the first volume of a Catalogue which has been for many years in preparation by Mr. Freeman O'Donoghue, Assistant-Keeper in the Department of Prints and Drawings. The work is designed to extend to five, or possibly six, volumes, and to provide a ready and complete means of reference, for students whether at home or abroad, to the great collection of national portraits preserved in the Department. This is beyond all comparison the most important and extensive collection of British engraved portraits which exists. It numbers at present upwards of 50,000 pieces, and includes the portraits of some 15,000 persons. To absolute completeness it can of course lay no claim. No collection ever can; least of all one which aims, as this does, at covering the whole field of national history from the introduction of the engraver's art in the sixteenth century to the present time. There is probably no section in which the specialist devoted to the study of one particular group or period may not find gaps. Thus in portraits of the Commonwealth, Restoration, and Revolution periods, the famous Sutherland collection at Oxford, formed with infinite research and labour for the special illustration of Clarendon's and Burnet's histories, is numerically much richer than the Museum collection. And in portraits of the last half of the nineteenth century and the present day the deficiences in the Museum collection are many. But on the whole it may be said that of the more important engraved portraits produced and published separately in England from the reign of Elizabeth to that of Victoria relatively very few are missing, and many occur in a series of several different states and impressions; while of the less important a vast majority are also here. Of those which were published as frontispieces or illustrations to books, and afterwards cut out to meet the appetites of collectors, many thousands are also included. And the endeavour to develop the collection gradually into a complete national iconography is steadily maintained, so far as opportunities occur and the pressure of other claims on the resources of the Department allows.

The sources from which the collection has been derived are very various. A great number of miscellaneous portraits came in with the Sloane collection at the first foundation of the Museum in 1753; a great number more, mostly of the finest quality, with the Cracherode bequest in 1799 ; another considerable increment was due to the Slade bequest in 1868 ; the greatest of all to the Cheylesmore bequest in 1902, which included about 8,000 mezzotint portraits, besides a series of some 3,000 portraits in various manners of English royalties in the Victorian age. In some instances a portrait-engraver or his representative has presented to the nation a complete series of his works ; it was in this way that James Ward and William Say, for example, among mezzotint engravers, come to figure so richly as they do in the collection. In others a bequest has taken the form of a richly extra-illustrated or 'Grangerized' copy of some historical work ; William Frederick Duke of Gloucester left the Museum two such series, Whitelocke's Memorials of Charles I. and Clarendon's History of the Rebellion. A large number of portraits are contained in the extra-illustrated copy of Pennant's London formed and bequeathed by J. C. Crowle ; and again in the sets of the Biographie Universelle and the Society of Artists and Royal Academy catalogues enriched with prints and bequeathed by Mr. J. H. Anderdon. A single comprehensive purchase, that of the collection of Dr. Charles Burney in 1817, endowed the Department with the most complete series of theatrical portraits that existed up to that date. For the rest, the acquisitions have been made chiefly in the form of purchases at auction sales and from dealers. In this way there have passed into the Museum a large proportion of the treasures of the Gulston, Masterman Sykes, and Duke of Buckingham's collections, all of which were extremely rich in the rare engraved portraits of the Elizabethan and Jacobean age ; as well as a continual flow of miscellaneous portraits, of all degrees of rarity and excellence, noted from time to time in sale catalogues as required to fill gaps in the national collection.

As concerns the custody and arrangement of the portraits themselves : the main collection is divided into periods and classes on a system derived from (but not identical with) that followed by Bromley in his 'Catalogue of Engraved British Portraits (1793).' In the very numerous cases where the same portrait occurs several times over, whether in different states or in repetitions of a single state, one impression is kept with the classed portrait collection, another with prints after the master by whom the portrait was painted, a third with specimen works of the engraver who executed the plate ; proof or picked impressions alone being as a rule chosen for the last-named purpose. In the case of certain painters whose fame and popularity create among students a demand to see all known engravings after them together in a single series, e.g., Reynolds and Lawrence, one impression of every engraved portrait by them is included in such a series. As to certain special collections, either testamentary provisions, as in the case of the Cheylesmore bequest, or, as in the case of the Duke of Gloucester's Clarendon, the material fashion of their binding and arrangement, compel them to be kept and treated separately. But these diversities in the arrangement and distribution of the portraits themselves place no difficulty in the way of their study and consultation, since a complete slip-index in alphabetical order, kept strictly up to date, enables any example of any portrait to be immediately found and laid before the student.

It is on the basis of this working index that the present catalogue has been compiled. The alphabetical order has been adopted as being the sole convenient one for general reference; the same principle had already been followed in the one comprehensive printed catalogue of British portraits hitherto in existence—that of the dealers Edward Evans and A. E. Evans and Sons (2 vols. published at intervals in the first half of the nineteenth century, both without date). To every name are appended birth and death dates when they can be ascertained, with just so much biographical fact as is necessary to identification added in the briefest form. A description, again the briefest that will serve for identification, is given of every print that is not a repetition of another just preceding it in the Catalogue and already described. In the case of all prints of importance, the dimensions of what is technically known as the 'subject,' i.e. the actual engraved work upon the plate, are given,—in inches, since the Catalogue is likely to be chiefly used by persons to whom that is the familiar mode of measurement. The names of painter and engraver, where they are known, are set out conspicuously in separate columns at the right of the page.

Persons consulting the Catalogue will do well to note and bear in mind the following further rules which have been observed in its compilation :—

Royal personages are in all cases entered under their Christian names.

When two or more persons, not being peers or peeresses, bear the same surname, they are catalogued in the alphabetical order of their Christian names.

Peers and peeresses are placed under their titles, the ladies following their husbands.

In cases where the same title has been held at different periods by persons of different name and family, the several groups of holders are arranged not in the alphabetical order of their family names but in order of date. Successive holders of the same title who belonged to the same family are similarly arranged in order of succession and not in the alphabetical order of their Christian names.

In cases where the title of nobility is also the family name, the holder of the title is placed before commoners of the same name.

All titled persons are catalogued under the latest style or title to which they attained, cross-references being given from any earlier style or title appearing on portraits of them engraved before their final promotion.

Women are catalogued under their latest married names; when portraits of them exist under their maiden or earlier married names, cross-references are given from these.

The portraits of each person are arranged in the alphabetical order of the names of the painters,* all those done from the same picture being grouped together, with the original or first engraving from the picture at the head, and copies, repetitions, or derivatives following. Where the name of the painter is not known, the arrangement is in the alphabetical order of the names of the engravers. In cases where either the painter's or engraver's name is known but not given on the published state of the plate, it is placed within brackets.

As a general principle only the published state of a print and any later issues of it are described ; but of all the more interesting and important examples of the engraver's art the proof states and the number of impressions preserved in the collection are also recorded.

Engraved portrait groups will be catalogued in a special section at the end of the work, a cross-reference being in the earlier volumes given from the name, placed in its proper alphabetical order, of every person who figures in such a group.

When any print has been described in an already published catalogue of engravings belonging to a particular class or executed by a particular master, a reference is given to such catalogue. The following is a list of the works so cited in Vol. I. :—

* To arrange them in the chronological order of the several ages at which the sitter is represented would obviously have been more satisfactory had it been possible to do so accurately; but it could only have been done loosely and by guesswork, since in most cases the only date recorded on the face of a print is that of its execution and publication, which may be an indefinite time after the date of the painting, and is often of course long after the death of the sitter.

25. W. L., in armour, on horseback, holding truncheon, a page carrying his helmet. Line; $20\frac{1}{2} \times 13\frac{3}{4}$ in. This plate has been the subject of much discussion on account of the numerous alterations to which it was subjected and the difficulty of satisfactorily accounting for them. Its general resemblance to Van Dyck's well-known 'Charles I. under an arch' has led to the assumption that it was commenced as a portrait of that monarch; but in the earliest state known, which is headless and before any inscription, the details of the costume show clearly that it was intended for Cromwell, and Lombart appears to have only borrowed the composition from Van Dyck, modifying it in many ways, and in particular substituting a page for M. de St. Antoine, who would have been out of place in a representation of Cromwell. The changes which the plate underwent cannot be explained by the vicissitudes of the Civil War and Commonwealth period, and it seems probable that they were made a good deal later, possibly in France—Lombart's native land—to which he returned at the time of the Restoration. The fact that at an early stage of the plate it was proposed to transform it into a	'A. Van Dyck'	P. Lombart portrait of Louis XIV. in full manhood (i.e. 1670 or later), the fashion of the page's breeches being altered to correspond, is strong evidence in favour of this theory; also the technique of the heads subsequently introduced suggests a later hand than Lombart's. Six states are known, the order of which is as follows:— (a) Proof before arms and inscription; scarf placed over shoulder, page's breeches wide at the knees and adorned with ribbons and lace frills; head of personage erased. (b) With head of Cromwell, arms and Latin inscription. (c) Head, coat of arms, and inscription taken out; etched outline head of Louis XIV. substituted; the page's breeches drawn in at the knees, the ribbons and frills being removed. (On an impression of this state in the Sutherland collection at Oxford a head of Gustavus Adolphus has been drawn in red chalk.) (d) With head of Cromwell again inserted, also the arms and inscription; scarf removed from shoulder and placed round waist. (e) With head of Charles I. substituted; chain with badge of the Garter added, frills restored to the page's breeches, arms and inscription changed. (f) Head of Cromwell again restored, but older than in state (d); original arms and inscription also restored. Of these states all are in the Museum collection except (b), of which an impression is in the Sutherland collection and another belongs to Earl Bathurst. The original copperplate, identical in all respects with state (f) is in the possession of Capt. Archibald Stirling of Keir.
